

I have had satellite radio in my vehicle for almost a year and a half now and I feel it is one of the best investments I've ever made. The types of programs that XM offers me are unbeatable. I pay $10 a month for the luxury of this programming and for the luxury of being able to hear what I want when I want, whether it be music or news or weather or traffic information. As an American it is my right to do so and it is also my right as a consumer of satellite radio and, specifically, XM to have a say in what types of programming I have the option of listening to. The NAB does not pay for the programming or the subscription and does not subscribe to the service and therefore has no say in the matter. One of the joys of living in a free-market, capitalist economy is the ability to make decisions for yourself that are the most beneficial from an economic standpoint without having others interfering. And, the FCC and the NAB attempting to control what decisions XM makes and trying to influence their business decisions is a violation of their rights and my rights...an interference.
